

Chapelle des Bioles

This is a place name that I like a lot. One expects to find a religious building and bam! One only sees a cave. Chapelle des Bioles is indeed a beautiful "balme" hollowed out from the limestone. A second cave, a bit less deep is located nearby.

As one can imagine, these caves are located nearby the Chalet des Bioles, near the Oujon hoods.

To reach them we will start from the Plateau d'Arzier to reach first the ruins of the Carthusian Monastery of Oujon. From there we will climb in order to take the path of "Nicolas". This forest road crosses the "exempted district of Noirmont". Thus, we will not leave the path. Once reached a place above Bioles, we will pass in front of the cave in order to get another path leading to Mont Roux. This way we will enjoy a magnificent view.
